Total to date

The Noble Art of Repartee. This is from the editorial columns of the Register:

William L. Wison is no less quick at reportes show he is deep in serious discussion. One or two Republicans who suffered yesterday by indiciously monkeying with the fariff buzz-saw can attend this.

And this, from the news columns of the same paper on the same day, shows where Prof. Wilson displayed his quickness in repartee, what sort of repartee it was, how quick he was to recover his customary politeness of bearing and to take back the offensive personality, how Mr. Reed turned the incident to account with lightning rapidity-in short, shows who got astride the tariff buzz-gaw and how much was left of him:

buzz-gaw and how much was left of him:

At 12:15 the house resolved itself into committee of the whole for the consideration of the unif bill, and bir Wilson resumed his speech of respectacy. He continued the thread of his arrument presenting his side of the case in forceful lenguage. His remarks were often interrupted by benocratic applause, but otherwise he was allowed to proceed until he created something of a sir when he referred to the fest that the protests against the pending hill were harpely inspired by the power of capital which directed, forced and frightened employes to sustain the protected industries. He said that when the effort to aboli it devery was being unde a petition had come from a large delegation of alares praying that sharery might be continued.

This brought to his feet Representaine Doullittle, of Washington, with the question. "And do you compare the haboring men of this country to the slave element of the south?"

Er. Wilson: "I think such a question would not be acted by any one shove the intrelligence of a slave." [fourd and prolonged applause on the Bemocratic side.]

there was much confusion following Mr. Wiiby santwer.

Mr. Boolitie said he did not eatch the answer

Mr. Roolling and no did not came us a service trid acked that the repeated, with the evident purpose of making a protest against it.

Mr. Wilson: "I desire to be courtsous to every one in this debate, so that I will now withdraw the newwer I zare the genteman."

Mr. Reed of Maine: "But you can't withdraw in the main of the protection of the protection of the protection." Mr. Reed of Maine: "But the Democratic applause."

It will be observed that the offense of comparing the protesting wage-earners of the days before the war, was not taken back by Prof. Wilson. That stands as his comment on the free American workingmen who have exercised their right of petition in asking that the Wilson tariff bill, which threatens their bread, be not passed.

There are thousands on thousands of American wage-earners who know it is not true that they have been "directed, forced and frightened' -into petitions "to sustain the protected industries." Prof. Wilson is allowed in this free country to follow the fancy of his theories. He should be willing that practical men shall speak from their practical experience and their practical knowledge of the difference between prosperity and starvation.

This would be better than being picked up in repartee and having to swallow his words.

The Ohio river at Wheeling, within the space of one short block, is now crossed by two bridges of cighs, not to say mighty grouns.

No Show for the Other Side. .

Chairman Wilson, of the ways and means committee, delivered the overture in behalf of his bill. Mr. Burrows, of the same committee, answered for the Republican side. The INTELLIGENCER gave fair reports of both. There was no discrimination.

The Register, having the same news report to draw on, gave all it could of Mr. Wilson's speech and nothing of the speech of Mr. Burrows. Did the Burrows speech hart so much as that? Was it thought unsale to give the Register's readers so strong an argument mainst the Democratic tariff bill?

This is heavy weather for Democratic organs, but they should try to pluck up courage and face the storm. It has hardly begun.

A "cuckoo" in Congress is a member of that body who stands by the administration, right or wrong.

Mr. Carnegie's Way Out.

Mr. Carnegie has plenty of money, has the bulge on other men in his line of business, and gravely proposes that Republicans join with the Democrats to put through a tariff measure that shall take the tariff question out of politics.

This is not the first intimation that Mr. Carnegie is losing interest in the protective system. An earlier one came when he refused to give anything to the Republican campaign fund. It may suit Mr. Carnegie to have the Democratic theory stamped on our statute books and written on the doors of closed industrial establishments less | said to be perfectly straight.

fortunate than his own, but it will be a long time before he will be able to bring Republicant in Congress down to his 1.4 x2

Meanwhile the struggle to maintain American industries against the victors assault of the Wilson bill goes on, and Mr. Carnegie goes bounding over the waves on his way to winter on the Nile. There are some millions of Americans who cannot go Mr. Carnegie's way.

DAVID B. HILL is not thought to be shedding any bring weeps over the Hawaiian predicament of his beloved _ 1 00 administration. David is something of a philosopher.

The Logic of the Position.

Mr. Johnson, Democratic congressman from Ohio, says he would abolish the customs houses and raise revenue without any customs tariff. Mr. Watterson would put a duty on tea, coifee and sugar and keep on putting duties on revenue-rielding commodities not produced in this country until he had provided for $200,000,000 of revenue. Then he would increase the internal tax on spirits and tobacco until he had $175,000,000 more. The remainder he would raise by an income tax.

Mr. Johnson's proposition need not alarm anyhody. No party in this country will take up with so wild a scheme. Mr. Watterson's idea is perfectly logical from the point of view of a tariff-forrevenue-only. It gives practical and logical expression to the Democratic platform of 1892. It is simple, honest, straightforward. There is no pretense of "taking care of" this industry or leaving "protection enough" for that. It is free trade as the British know it and practice it.

It may be said that the Democratic party will never take up with the Watterson idea. Until 1892 few believed that the Democratic party would go the length it did on the tariff question in its platform of that year. Let the Democratic party get its entering wedge well in, and nothing is more probable than that the country would be struck at last with a tariff contrivance as sublimely simple and coldly brutal as that which Mr. Watterson favors.

The advocates of the Wilson bill defend their messure against the criticism of those Democrats who are dissatisfied because it does not go far enough, explaining that for the present they have zone as far as they could; at some more convenient time they will go further and cut deeper.

If anybody supposes for a moment that the Democratit protection-destroying vengeance is to be glutted by the passage of the Wilson bill, he is too innocent for this wicked world. The intention is to push on to an ideal tarifffor-revenue-only, in which there is no place for protection. Any honest Democrat who endorses his party's platform will admit this without hes?tation.

The protest of the woolen manufacturers is one of the very strongest yet sent to Congress against the passage of the Wilson bill. It merits the careful attention of every American. Its points cannot be answered.

The New Bridge Tolls.

The Garden Spot has had its breath almost taken away by the new toll scheme of the bridge companies. Competition results in this sort of thing some times, yet if the new bridge had of this country with the African slaves | been opposed on this ground the opposition would have been thought to be crazy or lacking in progressive ideas.

A new bridge, however convenient, situated as the topography required it should be, was like the parallelling a railroad by another tapping the same territory and stopping at the same stations. There is little if any increase in the sum total of traffic; two roads compote for the business that one had before; both weary of the game and come to an understanding.

This is where the public interest develops on a new line, for there are now two capital stock accounts where there was but one before, and almost certainly a comfortable bonded indebtedness to take care of; and for the safety of two corporations the business must in some way be made to support the old corporation and the new.

This is true whether a consolidation comes or whether the two content themselves with operating for their mutual advantage. The thing that has happened in respect of the Island bridges is not a surprise to everybody.

John L Sullivan was not behaving nimself right well and Mrs. John L. tapped him on the head with an Indian club. For sixty long minutes Mr. John L. slept, in spite of the efforts of the medical man to arouse him. The right use of the Indian club should be better understood by the wives of the land.

Ir they had Reed's rules and Reed's brains and Reed's patriotism, backed by the Republican determination to run the country on business principles, the Democrats in Congress would get on quite well.

Mr. Teacy may slap Mr. Boutelle's face, but he will have to catch the Maine man off his goard and then take his punishment. Mr. Bontelle can take care of himself in several artistic ways.

MR, MASON AND CONGRESS. More Demands That He Become a Candidate-Letters from the Second District.

To the Editor of the Intelligencer. Siz: In your issue of January 1, is a statement to your Fairmont correspondent by Hon. John W. Mason, to the effect that he could not accept the nomination for Congress in the Second congressional district, giving as a reason for his decision, that he had, "through the kindness of friends held a good place recently." This being true, and because it is true, his friends now expect him to accept a position which is not a good paying place, but in which he has been needed for several years. The Republicans of the Second district want him and expect him to be their standard bearer this fall, and the interests of West Virginia cry aloud for his services in Congress. The man whose hand is now raised against every industry of the state, together with his theories, which have been gleaned from the apostles of John Bull, must be buried into "resurrectionless oblivion," and we need just such a big, broad, brave, brainy man as John W. Mason to lead us in the accomplishment of the Work

Romney, W. Va., Jan., 8, 1894.

Why Mr. Mason Should Consent.

20 the Editor of the Intelligencer. Siz:-Republicant of this section are not a little surprised and disappointed on reading the statements of Hon. John W. Mason, which appeared in the In-TELLIGENCES of the 1st inst., in which he prefers to continue the practice of his profession rather than go to Congress, True, from a financial standpoint, the position is not at all desirable, but what is the practice of law or any other business in West Virginia, when another country is to supply us with coal, wool and lumber?

What is any profession in West Virginia when all our interests are suffering from the proposed law of the present representative in Congress from this district? There are a number of able men in the Republican party in this district, who would do noble service, but all these "friends" that Mr. Mason speaks of want him to go to Congress, because he is "the strong man"—because he is the logical candidate on whom all eyes have been turned since the English bill was prepared by Mr. Wilson.

The nomination of Mr. Mason would not only be a godsend to the Second district and West Virginia, but it would be a national blessing, and a disaster to the Democratic party. This is not the time for good men to serve their own interests alone. The people want, and must have their services, that the country may be rid of the blight which has paralyzed our industries, which is the immediate outgrowth of the policy of the Democratic party.
Yours truly,

Mayscille, W. Va., Jan. 10.
